INTRODUCTION

FAMILY FROM STICKNEY HILL

Stickney Hill is one mile east of Brownville village in the State of Maine. Brownville is a fairly small town located in Piscataquis County near the geographical center of Maine. It is shown on most road maps, and appears in detail on a U.S. Geological Survey map designated as "SEBEC ME." very close to the right-hand edge of the map. There is at least one other Stickney Hill in Maine, near Athens in Somerset County. However this book concerns the people of Stickney Hill in Piscataquis County.

The aforementioned U.S. map shows most of the houses in Brownville, including the Stickney homestead. An enlarged detail of this map is presented here, marked with an arrow to show the exact spot. There is another edifice shown slightly to the left of the homestead. This is the ruins of a one-man camp built previous to 1940 by 914 Wendell Stickney. That this camp appears at all is evidence of the loving care of the surveyor and mapmaker.

This question arises: Why did one of the original settlers of Brownville choose to build his house on an extremely rocky tract located near the brow of a steep hill, a mile out of town and 345 feet above it, where the winter chill factor sometimes reaches seventy degrees below zero? There are two obvious reasons; one, it appears that hilltop farms are fairly common in this part of Maine, perhaps because they escape early fall frosts which kill crops on valley farms; two, because of the finest view for many miles around. This view, as seen from the large cupola at the top of the homestead barn, extended from Mt. Katahdin in the north, thru the nearby mountains of central Maine in the northwest, the far-distant mountains of western Maine and New Hampshire in the west, the hills of Penobscot County in the southwest, to the far-away mountains of Hancock County in the southeast. There was also a good view of Brownville village.

To wring a living from the rocky soil of Stickney Hill required a great deal of energy and a habit of hard work. At least twelve cords of wood for heat were required annually. These were cut and hauled from distant woodlots, to be sawed and split and put under cover by the younger members of the family, who started at an early age. Growing of crops taught children the importance of doing the needed thing at the right time. Everything was done by muscle power in the early days. Gasoline power became available shortly after 1910, but electricity did not arrive until 1926.

As a result of this heritage, the people from Stickney Hill developed good habits and became respected citizens. They recognized the value of education and worked hard to get it.

Today most of the family lives "away," where work of their choice is obtainable. But every year, around the first of August, the call of Stickney Hill is heard and the old homestead is filled to overflowing.

INTRODUCTION

A Genealogy of the Stickney Family from 1637 to 1869 was compiled by Matthew Adams Stickney, and 500 copies were printed in the year 1869. Copies of this 535 page volume are now treasured by a few fortunate families. There was a copy in the Library of New Bedford, Mass. in 1967, and other libraries may have a copy. The 1869 genealogy covered many branches of the family as far as tracing was possible.

For the interest of present and future generations, Part One of this volume consists of photographic reproduction of the preface of the 1869 genealogy, plus copies of significant pages showing Enos Wilder Stickney as a descendant of William Stickney 1592-1665, who came to America in 1638. Small arrows have been added to the latter pages to aid the reader in following the line of descent.

PREFACE.

"STYCKNEY."

A NATURAL desire to know the history of my ancestors was increased by the narratives of my aged relatives, who were well acquainted with their past history. I was thus induced in early life to obtain from them all the information which they could impart. In the year 1833 I commenced to procure copies of all the records deposited in the various offices located in the places where any of the name had resided.

At first I gave especial attention to the descendants of Amos, son of William, my direct ancestor. In collecting materials to trace his line, to the present time, the records of many of the other descendants of William Stickney were obtained. The knowledge that such records were in my possession caused frequent applications to be made to me, by members of collateral branches, for information which it was then difficult to give, as these materials were not systematically arranged.

Influenced mainly by a sense of duty, and partly at the solicitation of others, I have collected and arranged the genealogy of the whole family to the present time, and I now offer this volume to its numerous members for whose benefit it was compiled.

From a careful examination of the works of Camden, and others, I am inclined to believe that we are of Norman descent. Our surname is Saxon, and significant of the situation of a Saxon settlement bordering on the East and West Fens or Marshes, and navigable water; but I believe we are descended from one of the followers of William the Norman; that among the possessions our Norman ancestor acquired, was "Stickney;" that it became a patrimony of one of his younger sons, who, on becoming lord of the manor of Stickney, assumed it as his surname.

In 1331 a John de Stickney was probably in the possession of that place, and the Arms mentioned on page 3 of the text were probably his. In 1422 John Craycrofte married the heir of Stickney, and their descendants have held it since, nearly five hundred years.

The Normans when they came into England, at the conquest, brought in the use of surnames taken from the places they were from, or possessed, with the prefix "de" (Norman-French). The eldest son continued to bear it (frequently dropping the de) as long as the family existed.

According to Camden it was the custom of the Normans' younger sons to take a surname from the villages or cities, which, in very early times, their fathers bestowed upon them; and so I account for a Norman taking the surname of Stickney.

The manor of Stickney was probably held by the eldest son until the marriage of the heir of Stickney with Craycrofte. The male line of that family appears to have then become extinct. We are probably descended from one of the younger sons of him who first came into possession of it.

Very few of the early emigrants to New England brought with them Coats of Arms. All marks of honor which their ancestors might have received were left without regret, and even the account of the relationship they bore to those in the old world was lost in carrying on the great enterprise in which they were engaged,—the founding of a new country.

In 1422 I find with the Arms of "Styckney," engraved at the head of the preface, "Ermines, three lozenges ermine," a record that "John Craycrofte of Craycrofte and Hogesthorpe 10 H (enry) 5, 1422, married . . . . daughter and heir of Stikney." [Visitations of Lincolnshire, 1564 and 1592, Harleian MS., No. 1550, p. 162, in the British Museum.] Our emigrant ancestor may have been entitled to the same Coat-Armour.

From the circumstance of William Stickney's having brought over with him a bible, now in existence, it is inferred that he could read; and from his signature on documents at Rowley that he could write; but it appears, from some cause now unknown, that both he and his son John made marks for their names when they executed their Wills. From the undoubted handwriting of John in the old bible, and from the documents quoted on pages 23 and 24, it appears he could write a handsome hand. It was not always usual to sign the name. A similar instance is given in the New Eng. Hist. and Gen. Reg. of 1853, p. 227.

William Stickney's descendants improved their advantages and obtained good practical educations. Twenty-three of the name are graduates of the New England Colleges and those of the adjoining states; others have received diplomas from its several professional schools: these, with the different offices held in Church and State, are given in the work.

The Registry of Deeds and Probate records, indicate that he and his descendants were extensive land-holders, and principally engaged in agriculture. It is worthy of remark that those devoted to that occupation reared large families, the members of which were intelligent and enterprising, and became the pioneers of many new settlements, while those residing in seaports, and engaged in maritime pursuits, have left small families, and in many cases these have become extinct.

The family from which I am descended were remarkable for their memory, reverence for their ancestors, and length of life. Jedediah Stickney [257], my grandfather, lived contemporary with Hannah, the widow of John Stickney [4], son of William the emigrant, and from her, through him, I learned the spot where he was buried, on which, at my suggestion, a monument was erected.

The author has collected, with great care and expense, the materials for this work, from the Archives of States, Records of Towns, Parishes, Wills, Deeds, Courts, Monumental Inscriptions, etc.; also from numerous letters received from different members of the family and others residing in all parts of the United States and adjacent Provinces.

That part of the genealogy which contains the male descendants I have endeavored to make as complete as possible. Nearly every individual has been accounted for, and his record defined. The daughters' families have not received that degree of attention, for want of time and space. The descendants here recorded number, together, five thousand five hundred and ninety-two, to which may be added many inserted without numbers.

The appendix contains brief notices of a few allied families; one family bearing the name of Stickney, the only one I have found, not descended from William, and two others who have assumed the name.

In preparing this work for publication I have received the valuable assistance of my second daughter, who, in consequence of my impaired health, has been my amanuensis, proof reader, and preparer of the index.

To all those having charge of the records which I have examined, I would here express my thanks for their polite and kind attentions; also to those who have communicated by letter, or otherwise, any information. To Mr. John O'Donnell, the foreman of the Essex Institute Printing Office, I tender my thanks for the faithful and careful manner in which he has performed his portion of the work.

Any correction of errors, or additional information, will be gladly received.

MATTHEW A. STICKNEY.

Salem, Dec. 10, 1869.

EXPLANATIONS.

WILLIAM STICKNEY is the first generation; his children the second; his grandchildren the third, and so on. It is noticed at the commencement of each generation, and in the running title. They are numbered in order on the left hand of the page, before the name of each individual in the genealogical series. The family of each son and daughter will be found under the number they have in the margin. If mention is made of them elsewhere, their place is indicated by their number in the margin enclosed in brackets, after their names.

Prior to 1752 the legal year began on the 25th of March, which was called the first month, April the second month, and so on, January being called the eleventh month, and February the twelfth. Therefore "Jan. 12, 1716," or "1716–17," in records previous to 1752, would be in modern reckoning, Jan. 12, 1717. And so of any date between Jan. 1st and March 25th.

When a woman's name occurs thus:—Prudence (Leaver) Gage, page 12, the reader will understand that the name in parenthesis is her original or maiden name, and the name following is the name acquired by marriage.

When deeds and probate records are referred to thus:—"Essex Deeds, 9: 160," the figures before the colon denote the volume, those after, the folio where the deed or document quoted, may be found on record.

Names and dates are given as found on record, or received in letters. The usual abbreviations of the names of States and of the Months, are employed. All towns are in Mass., when not otherwise designated. b., signifies born; bapt., baptized; m., married; unm., unmarried; pub. and int., publication of the intention of marriage; ch., child or children; dau., daughter; d., died; d. y., died young; adm., administered; r., reside; ? indicates uncertainty in what immediately precedes.

To find an individual recorded in this volume suppose it to be Daniel Stickney who married Sarah Morse. There are twenty-one Daniel Stickneys recorded in this book. This Daniel was born in 1760. Find the name of Daniel among the Christian names of the Stickneys in Index I, preceded by 1760, the year of his birth, which is followed by 306, his consecutive number. The number 306 will at once direct to page 105, his name is found in the 11th line from the top. You perceive that Daniel Stickney [306] was the son of Daniel Stickney, above whose name at the beginning of the paragraph (page 104) in the middle of the line, you find 97 in heavy type. This directs to 97 in the consecutive numbering on the left hand of page 53, where you find that Daniel Stickney was the son of Samuel Stickney [30], b. in Rowley, 1690 (page 52), who, you will see, was the son of John Stickney [4], son of the first emigrant. In a like manner you may trace any one to the original emigrant, William Stickney.

THE STICKNEY FAMILY.

WILLIAM STICKNEY, the first settler, was the ancestor of nearly all who have since borne that name in America. It is inferred from records procured in England for the author, by Horatio G. Somerby, Esq., that he was the William, who is mentioned as baptized in St. Mary's Church, Frampton, Lincolnshire, England, September 6, 1592, and the son of WILLIAM STICKNEY of Frampton, who was baptized December 30, 1558, and married, June 16, 1585, Margaret Peirson, and the grandson of ROBERT STICKNEY of Frampton, who made his will October 3, and was buried October 18, 1582.

Frampton is a parish in the wapentake of Kirton, parts of Holland, county of Lincoln, England, three and one-fourth miles south from Boston. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. It is a fine old stone edifice, an engraving of which is in the possession of the author. The parish register of this church contains many records of baptisms, marriages and burials of Stickney's from 1558 to 1609. The name does not appear on these records after this date.

Tradition and information obtained in England, render it probable that the family removed to Hull, or its vicinity. I learn from Mrs. Sarah Ellis, of Rose Hill, near London, England (formerly Miss Sarah Stickney, an authoress of some repute in England and America), that "The old family residence was at Ridgmont, a beautiful place about nine miles east of Hull, where my father and his forefathers, for many generations had lived, hospitably and honorably, keeping almost open house in a large mansion, and receiving guests from all countries, who generally found something to learn, or at least to interest, in my father's great practical knowledge and scientific pursuits, and where he died in 1848, aged 85 years."

The surnames of the first emigrants to New England, were derived from various sources. Those considered most ancient and respectable, were derived from places, cities and towns, as in almost every case they existed in England, long before the use of surnames.

In the county of Lincoln is situated the parish of Stickney, from which the family derived its surname. "Stickney is a large village on the Boston road, distant eight and a half miles north of Boston station, three from New Bolingbroke and eight miles south-west of Spilsby; it is pleasantly situated on the borders of the East and West Fens, in the soke of Bolingbroke, Union of Spilsby, Lindsey division, and diocese of Lincoln. The living is a rectory, value £356, in the patronage and incumbency of the Rev. George Coltman. The church is dedicated to St. Luke, is a handsome building in the early English style: it consists of a lofty tower containing four bells, nave, ailes, and chancel and antique porch. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a chapel. A school for the education of the poor was endowed, in 1678, by one William Lovell, who demised land at Winthrope, which produces a rental of £95 per year, together with two acres at Stickney, let for £5 per year. The master, Jonathan Adams, has a house, and an usher to assist in teaching the children. The population in 1841 was 895; the area in acres, including the Fen allotment, is 2,050; rateable value £3,629. Robert Cracroft, Esq., is lord of the manor. The charities amount to about £43 a year, for the benefit of the poor. It has navigation to Boston." [From the Post Office Directory of Lincolnshire, England, 1849.]

Mr. Robert Stickney of New York City, while in Boston, England, in the spring of 1868, was called upon by an aged gentleman of the name of Stickney, who, struck by the similarity of name, and learning that he was from the United States, invited him to his house (built one hundred and fifty years before), in the place of Stickney, near by. He there saw the Coat of Arms of the family, and the gentleman gave him a view of the old Moat House, and the following information in his own handwriting, which he forwarded to me, May 26, 1868.

"This chantry was attached to the Guild of Saint Lawrence, the above represents the last portion of the building, it was called the Moat House and was taken down in 1836. The chantry was founded in 1362 in the parish of Leak near Boston. The walls of the Moat House were of stone and of great strength. On the chimney piece of one of the chambers were four shields, one of them quartering the arms of Hunston, Sutton, Stickney, Whiting, Gedney and Enderby. The other bore the arms of Hunston, Sutton, Stickney, Whiting, impaling those of Smith of Elsham. Various remains of gilding and ornamental work, showed that the room had been very handsomely got up."

"In the reign of Edward III., 1331, one hundred and thirty-one persons are taxed in Boston, of whom John de Tumby paid £4, the highest charge; among the names of the others, is John de Stickney, who paid about £1, a large sum in those days. This John de Stickney, or one of his family, was probably a member of the Guild of Saint Lawrence, from the Arms of Stickney being carved on the chimney piece. [Extracted from the History of Boston and the neighborhood.]"

This gentleman expressed his belief that both the American family and his own, were connections, and derived their name and origin from the same source, and it is hoped that hereafter a fuller account of WILLIAM STICKNEY and his ancestors, than can be given from the scanty materials now obtained, may be procured.

At what time WILLIAM STICKNEY married, the surname of his wife, where he resided in England, and the date of the births or baptisms of his children, the name of the ship in which he embarked, as tradition says, at Hull, or the time of his arrival in Boston, New England, have not been ascertained.

His son Samuel, in a deposition in 1698, names some of the passengers with them, who settled in Rowley, but nothing further.

Mr. Savage, in his Genealogical Dictionary, gives his "having come probably the year preceding, from Hull, in Yorkshire," that is in 1637, which is probably correct, as the first information obtained of him here, is from the records of the First Church in Boston, the Rev. John Wilson's, to which were admitted:

"The 6t of ye 11th moneth 1638
WILLYAM STICKNEY a husbandman &
Elizabeth his wife,
Margaret Crosse a Widdowe
Michaell Hopkinson servant to our brother Jacob Elyott &
Richard Swanne a husbandman"

"The 24th day of ye 9th Moneth 1639
Our brethren Mr. Henry Sandys, WILLYAM STICKNEY, Richard Swanne & Michaell Hopkinson by ye Churches Silence were dismissed to ye gathering of a Church at Rowley if the Lord so please."

He and his wife Elizabeth and three children, Samuel, Amos and Mary (who were probably baptized in England), were among the original settlers of Rowley, Mass. This place was settled in the year 1639, a division of the land was not made till the year 1643, when a survey of the town was taken by Thomas Nelson, Mr. Edward Carleton, Humphrey Reyner and Francis Parrot; streets were then laid out and named, and house lots assigned to its sixty original settlers, varying in size from one and a half, to six acres. The land otherwise not appropriated, was termed Commons, and every one and a half acre house lot was entitled to one and a half gates, or cow-rights, and other lands were laid out in the same proportion as these rights bore to the house lots.

There was laid out "On Wethersfield Streete, To WILLIAM STICKNEY one lott containinge one acre and a halfe, bounded on the west side by James Barker's house lott and the highway, part of it lyinge on the north side of the streete, and part of it on the south side."

Here he erected a house, on the corner of Bradford and Wethersfield streets, a little westerly of where the late Deacon Nathaniel Mighill's house now stands, 1868.

In his will, dated Jan. 21, 1664, it was conveyed by him to his wife Elizabeth, during her natural life; after her decease to go to his son John, he paying the legacies, &c.

Lieut. John Stickney, his son, in his will, dated Feb. 26, 1708-9, gave the homestead to his wife Hannah, with power to sell a wood-lot, towards the finishing of a new house, after her decease to go to his children.

Samuel Stickney, his son, in his will dated Feb. 15, 1753, conveyed the homestead to his wife Susannah, after her decease to be divided to his sons.

The portion which his son Moses Stickney, by inheritance and purchase of the other heirs, possessed of the ancient homestead, was conveyed in his will, dated April 5, 1792, to his wife Sarah; on her decease or marriage, to daughter Hannah, who died the widow of Joseph Kilborn, Sept. 19, 1853, at the age of ninety years. A part of the estate now (1868) remains in the possession of her niece, Mrs. Sarah (Stickney) Vinton.

The original settlers of Rowley, as Governor Winthrop writes in his Journal, "were godly men, and most of them of good estate," as will be shown by the fact that WILLIAM STICKNEY, our ancestor, and one of these settlers, brought with him, from his native land, a quarto copy of King James' translation of the Bible, first edition, printed 1611. This Bible has descended from father to son, in the same line as the old homestead, to Josiah Stickney, a brother of Mrs. Kilborn. He left it to his son, Deacon Nathaniel Stickney of Dracut, Mass., who now owns it in good preservation. This Bible was used at the celebration of the two hundredth anniversary of the settlement of Rowley. The most ancient half-way covenant (as it used to be called), of any that could be found in the town, and various names and dates are written in it. [See Gage's History of Rowley, p. 458.]

"On the seventh of October 1640, Mr. Samu. Dudley, Josias Cobbitt, Edmond Gardner, James Barcker, Henry Sands, Rob't Hunter and WILLI: STICKNEY, were admitted Freemen." [Colonial Records.]

WILLIAM STICKNEY was a member of an important committee in 1652, to draw up "a covenant and agreement" between the town of Rowley and the first settlers of the Merrimack lands, now Bradford. [See Rowley Records.] He was Clerk of the Market, and on Jury of Trials in 1653, Selectman 1656 and 1661, also in 1661 styled Lieutenant.

The ancient possession books of Rowley, contain frequent grants of land to him, but the amount to which he and his sons became entitled in the right of their freeholds, and the offices they held, in consequence of the loss of a part of the early business records of the town, is unknown. There was granted to him, land in "Bradford Streete field," "Batcheler's Meadow," "Rough Meadow," "Hawk Meadow," and "Pollipod field."

February 16, 1661, "Voted that WILLIAM STICKNEY have the Gate on the Common laid out to him in the Rate of thirty shillings a Gate."

"At a legal town meeting in Rowley, November 26, 1662, voted that Richard Swan, Sam'l Brockelbank, Ezekiel Northend, John Pickard and WILLIAM STICKNEY should lay out sundry lots of land," one of which was "to WILLIAM STICKNEY on east side of Long Hill."

"Richard Swan, WILLIAM STICKNEY, and William Jackson, were appointed by the town in 1662, to sell Trees in the Town street to such as design them to stand for use against their houses or lands."

"Feb'y 25th 1661-2, The Selectmen for the present year Richard Swan, John Dresser, Thomas Tenney, Abel Longley, John Brocklebank, being empowered by the Towne for to Let or to dispose of the land that Mr. Rogers gave for the use of the Ministry. They have accordingly disposed of the same for the term of seven years as followeth. Imp's. To WILLIAM STICKNEY and Samuel Stickney the one half of the land, upland and meadow, they to pay £4 rent by the year to be paid in Corne for the use of the minyestry and to be paid when the rates are paid, they are to put on land twenty loads of Manure during the terme of 7 years and to make and maintain the fences."

In a Tax List dated between 1660 and 1664, of an amount of £46, 8s. 2d., his quota was 19s. 4d., and the whole number of persons taxed was thirty-five.

March 1, 1660, WILLIAM STICKNEY and wife Elizabeth, of Rowley, sold to Jeremiah Elsworth, of the same town, land in Rowley, which they acknowledged, March 17, 1663, before Samuel Symonds. [Essex Deeds, 2 : 186.]

May 27, 1662, he with wife Elizabeth and of Rowley, "for four pounds convey to James Barker of the same Town all that our proportion of land layd out to us in the land commonly called Merrimacke land being by estimation forty acres, be it more or less, with the preveledges belonging thereto, as it lyeth bounded by land of the sayed James Barker on the west, the east syde bounded by land of William Scales the northend butting on Merrimack river, the southend butting on Common land or the vilage line." Wit. Sam'l Brocklebanke and Jachin Reyner. Ack. July 22, 1662, before Samuel Symonds. [Ibid, 2 : 165.]

May 27, 1662. He buys of William Scales and Ann his wife of Rowley, their proportion of land laid out to them "in land commonly called Merrimack land being 40 acres, bounded by land laid out to WILLIAM STICKNEY on ye west, on east by land laid out to Lieut. John Remington now Peter Nash's, south end on village line, north on Merrimack River" &c. Wit. Sam'l Brocklebanke and James Barker. Ack. July 22, 1662, before Sam'l Symonds. [Ibid, 67 : 185.]

In 1660, he, with James Baley, testifies in regard to the sale of half a corn-mill by Richard Dummer, of Newbury, to John Pearson, of Rowley. [Ibid, 6 : 9.]

March 29, 1664. He gave in his deposition before Robert Lord, clerk, in regard to the settlement of the estate of "Ann Lum the mother of John Pickard." [Ibid, 2 : 197.]

In the Town Books of Rowley, it is recorded, that WILLIAM STICKNEY was buried January 25, 1664-5. He left a will, the original of which is still preserved (folded and filed) in the Essex Probate Office at Salem, of which the following is an attested copy :

"I WILLIAM STICKNEY, of Rowley in the county of Essex in New England, being weake of body, but of perfect understanding and memory, do make and ordaine this my last will and testament.

First. I will and commit my soulle unto God that gave it; and my body unto the common burying place, in the hope of a blessed resurrection.

And as for my outward estate, after funeral expenses discharged, I will and dispose as followeth.

Imprimis. The estate of Capt. Samuel Brocklebank (his father-in-law) was settled by an agreement among the heirs, June 17, 1691, to which is attached the autograph signature of "John Stickne." [Essex Probate.]

"At a Meeting of the inhabitants of Rowley Feb. 25, 1694–5 Capt. Daniel Wicom, Lieut. It was situated on the corner of two lanes, known as Gedney Court, which leads from High to Summer Street. The house was built as early as 1645, by Richard Claydon, a native of England, and was known as the "French House," so called from having been a place of shelter for a number of unfortunate French emigrants. It was used as a Custom House thirty-four years, and then sold to William B. Brown of Beverly, who sold it to Major Peter Frye of Salem. Dr. Wm. Bentley ascertained the date of its erection, by the mantle-tree, which was marked 1645, in large and handsome characters.

ST. LUKE'S CHURCH AND MONUMENT
STICKNEY, LINCOLNSHIRE, ENGLAND

This is the only remaining building in Stickney containing structures which were in existence between the 13th and 15th centuries when Stickneys were living there.

Mr. Hodge, the Vicar, pointed out to 908 Rachel Stickney one of the four 13th century arcades which is still a part of the building.

PART TWO

STICKNEY, ENGLAND REVISITED

In July, 1971 I spent two days in the present town of Stickney, Lincolnshire, Boston, England. It is about a three hour ride by train from London.

I was most fortunate in finding the Vicar of St. Luke's Church in Stickney, Mr. Leonard Hodge. He showed me thru the church, pointed out the lay of the land, and filled me in on the early development of the "Fens".

From Mr. Hodge's GUIDE FOR VISITORS: "Before the drainage of the Fens this parish was largely swamp and marshland. The place where this church stands is the highest part of the surrounding area and would stand high and dry even in the wettest weather.

"The final syllable in the name of the place, 'ney' is a corruption of an Anglo-Saxon word 'Eyot' meaning 'an island'. This is how it must have appeared for much of each year. There is an old tradition that an earlier name was St. Luke's in the Forest. Deer antlers have been ploughed up in the parish, a reminder of the trees which once covered the district."

Mr. Hodge referred me to Mrs. Emily Stickney Spencer of Cleveland Hts., Ohio, who reports in her ENGLISH ANCESTRY OF WILLIAM STICKNEY:

"A good part of the county is fenland and lay very low, with only occasional islands or 'ees' standing above the water (indeed, that is where our name Stickney comes from, meaning a stick island or 'ee' — the 'n' is probably left from a Gaelic article) — Stick-n-ey.

"To reach the rich and fertile soil, an elaborate system of drainage has been worked out, begun by the Romans who built the Carr Dyke, and continued since the Conquest, often against the will of the inhabitants, who lived off the fen, on fish and wild fowl etc. The brave fenmen followed Hereward the Wake for fifteen years after the Norman Conquest and were the last to acknowledge the Conqueror, never becoming Norman in manner or language and keeping a sort of independence. It is said that the ordinary speech of East Lincolnshire is the purest English in the land. Ditching, dyking and draining were the only means of making it possible to farm the land, and in the 16th Century and under Charles I the Dutch were asked to come and help direct the draining."

As evidence of the continuing successful agriculture, I found myself in Stickney at the height of the strawberry season!

Finally Mr. Hodge furnished me with a stack of picture postcards and facilities for sending about three dozen to various members of the family with the Stickney postmark.

NOTE: PART 2-A

In 1970 Mrs. Emily Stickney Spencer published the results of her research in England entitled:

ENGLISH ANCESTRY OF WILLIAM STICKNEY

ROWLEY, MASSACHUSETTS, 1638

100 copies were printed for the author by Montgomery Printing Co. of Cleveland, Ohio. Mrs. Spencer is presently residing at 2432 Kenilworth Road, Cleveland Hts., Ohio 44106.

With Mrs. Spencer's permission we show the following compilation of William Stickney's actual, probable and possible ancestors, which is derived in part from her extensive research in English records.

Names and dates which are in bold type have been verified by Mrs. Spencer. Some of the earlier listings are based upon logical interpretation of dates, ages etc. and must be considered as possible or traditional.

Part 2-A
Ancestors of William Stickney (1592-1665) Who came to America in 1638

JOHN DE STICKNEY, CIRCA 1331

was lord of the manor of Stickney in Lincolnshire.

(No known records of the intervening generations).

In 1422 the British Museum records a marriage of the daughter and heir of Stickney to John Craycrofte.

In 1849 the Post Office Directory of Lincolnshire, England, shows a Robert Craycroft as lord of the manor of Stickney, Lincs.

We are probably descended from one of the younger sons of a de Stickney of the manor of Stickney. A son from this branch of the family may have been the father of:

WILLIAM STICKNEY'S GREAT GREAT GREAT GRANDFATHER

Thomas Stickney d. 1492
m. Elizabeth Thorold or Margaret Drake
Who may have been the parents of:

WILLIAM STICKNEY'S GREAT GREAT GRANDFATHER

William Stickney, circa 1465-1533
Held land of Stone Hall Manor, Frampton 1495-1533
Traditionally married Mary (or Euphemia) Scargill.

WILLIAM STICKNEY'S GREAT GRANDFATHER

Thomas Stickney, circa 1490-1546

WILLIAM STICKNEY'S GRANDFATHER

Robert Stickney 1534-1582

Married Margaret Pearson on June 16, 1584 who was born Nov. 22, 1562 and died Jan. 11, 1592 or 93.

Numbering - Part 2-B

The numbers for descendants in PART 2-B are identical with the numbers used by Matthew Adams Stickney 1869 and reproduced in PART ONE of this volume.

Note: Parts 2-B and 2-C

Much of the information in Parts 2-B and 2-C has been obtained from the records of 910 Warren Atwood Stickney, whose unexpected death in 1966 ended many years of research in family history.

Part 2-B
William Stickney (1592-1665) and some of his Descendants

FIRST GENERATION IN AMERICA

William Stickney, the ancestor of nearly all who have borne that name in America, was the son of William Stickney (1558-1591) and Margaret (Pearson) Stickney of Frampton, Lincolnshire, England. He was baptized in Frampton Sept. 6, 1592. He and his wife Elizabeth (Dawson) Stickney and three children (Samuel, Amos, Mary) embarked for New England at Hull, probably in 1637, remained in Boston for several months, and were among the original settlers of Rowley, Mass. in 1639. He died in Rowley, 1665. Ten children.

SECOND GENERATION

4 John Stickney, third son of William and Elizabeth, was born in Rowley Jan 4 1640, and married there Jun 9 1680 Hannah Brocklebank, daughter of Capt. Samuel Brocklebank. He was one of the twelve men impressed from Rowley Nov 29 1665 by Capt. Brocklebank to serve in King Philip's War. He was a Lieutenant in 1677, a Selectman of Rowley in 1688 and 1689, and Constable in 1695. He died in Rowley, 1709. Seven children.

THIRD GENERATION

30 Samuel Stickney, eldest son of John and Hannah, was born in Rowley Mar 26 1690. He married Nov 15 1715 Susannah Perley. They resided in Rowley, where he died Nov 3 1760. His widow died Jul 12 1773 aged 76. Ten children.

FOURTH GENERATION

95 William Stickney, third son of Samuel and Susannah, was born in Rowley Aug 27 1726. He married Feb 18 1743 Mary Sawyer, daughter of Benjamin Sawyer of Amesbury, and lived in Rowley and Byfield, Mass. He died in 1808. Nine children.

PART TWO-B

FIFTH GENERATION

➔ 302 Samuel Stickney, fourth son of William and Mary, was born in Rowley May 13 1762. He enlisted as a fifer in Capt. Simeon Brown's company in 1778, as sergeant in Capt. Benjamin Peabody's company in 1779, in the 31st Division in 1780, and as a fifer in Capt. John Robinson's company 1781. (Note: The inscription on the family monument in Brownville cemetery states that he received an honorable discharge as Major in 1781). He married (1) May 11 1784 Irene Rawlings of Newbury. She died Sep 1787. Two children. He married (2) Apr 29 1792 Martha (Patty) Atwood, daughter of Benjamin Atwood of Bradford, Mass. He resided in Rowley, Bradford, and Ware, N.H., from which place he moved to Brownville, Maine, in 1809. He bought a 50 acre lot on the north side of the road opposite the present Stickney place, and the log cabin where he lived at first is believed to have been located at the foot of Stickney Hill, near the site of the Leslie Wells house.

He operated a mail route along the trail between Brownville and Bangor, and was in the habit of doing errands for the settlers. At one time he was engaged to bring a grindstone from Bangor, which he cheerfully did, traveling by foot with the grindstone on his back. When asked what he charged, he replied "ninepence, all I ever ask for doing an errand".

It is probable that he worked with his sons Silas and Simeon building the Stickney homestead after the land was purchased in 1825.

After 1833 he and his wife lived with their son Simeon, probably in what is now part of the Stickney house.

He died Jan 9 1835. His widow died Oct 2 1845. Eleven children.

SIMEON ATWOOD STICKNEY, 1807-1882

Son of Samuel Stickney and father of Enos Wilder Stickney.

With his father, his brother Silas and his son Enos he helped build the Stickney homestead, and lived there until 1882.

Known as "Uncle Simeon" to half the town, he was loved by his grandchildren Myron, Nettie, Malcolm and Clinton. He had his sap camp, a predecessor of the present one, and young folks loved to come up there from the village in the maple sugar season.

Simeon had a way with animals, and apparently was able to communicate with unfriendly ones. His grandson Myron at age 102+ tells a story of his own childhood: "Grandfather and I went over to see Charles Wells who kept a Bunter (ugly male sheep) on his front yard. Grandfather looked at the bunter and said "L-O-O-oh!" very loud, deep and long, and he didn't bother us."

In his later years Simeon lived in the northeast sitting room and kept maple sugar on hand in a pink and white sugar bowl for his grandchildren. Photo enlarged from a small tintype by Fernald Stickney, 1973.

The Numbering System for Part 2-C and the Biographies of Part Four Starting with Enos Wilder Stickney of the Seventh Generation in America, a number has been assigned to each descendant. This number appears to the left of the name. The first one or two digits of the number indicate the generation in America.

Spouses of descendants have been assigned the same number as the descendant plus the suffix A or B.

For convenience in tracing ancestry the number of the line parent appears in ( ) to the right of the descendant's name.

Abbreviations for Part 2-C

m = married
c: = children
b = born
div = divorce

Descendants of Enos Wilder Stickney are invited to add data for your ancestors since generation seven to the table above. All necessary facts will be found in PART 2-C of this volume. You will then have a record of ancestors back into the fifteenth century.

The number of ancestors within a generation doubles every generation as one explores back in time. If all ancestors could be plotted graphically the result would be a "family tree" of infinite height and width. The number of ancestors would be infinite. This is why it has been found necessary to limit PARTS 2A and 2B of this book to a record of the male ancestors of one man.

Another limitation is the tendency of records to become missing, scarce, or sometimes unreadable with age. The name "de Stickney" appears as far back as 1331 in England, but reliable documentation has not yet been found.

The two right-hand columns above are correctly aligned for a child born into the 12th Generation. If you belong in some other generation, you can mentally slide these columns up or down to place YOU opposite your proper generation. Then the number of your ancestors will be correct for all previous generations.

Part Three

INTRODUCTION

Part three includes a collection of photographs considered to have some connection with the history of Stickney Hill or of the families of Enos Wilder Stickney and his descendants.

Photography started to become popular about 1880. Previous to this, only studio or professional pictures were generally available. By about 1890 the children of Enos Wilder Stickney were equipped with the large folding cameras of the day, made chiefly from wood and brass. They were taking pictures of their favorite scenes on 5″ x 7″ and 3¼″ x 4¼″ glass plates, some of which are still existent.

Many pictures were taken during camping expeditions to places such as Katahdin Iron Works, Gulf Hagas, Baker Mountain, and various lakes. Some of the pictures taken during this period are reproduced here, along with others taken at various times and places by succeeding generations.

STICKNEY HOMESTEAD, BROWNVILLE, MAINE

Started about 1825 by Samuel Stickney and his sons Silas and Simeon, completed in 1883 by Enos Wilder Stickney, the buildings are on the west brow of Stickney Hill at a ground elevation of 680 feet. From the cupola elevation of 720 feet there was a magnificent view of the mountains of central Maine, extending from Mt. Katahdin in the north, thru the west to the mountains of Hancock County in the southeast. On extra clear winter days the mountains of western Maine and New Hampshire could be seen. This photo shows part of the northwest view. 1922 photo by 910 Warren Stickney.

With belts, shafts and pulleys, 805 Clinton Stickney was able to operate the kitchen pump from a gasoline engine in the cellar. This engine also operated the washing machine, lathe, table saw, and a circular saw and a drag saw for the woodpile. All water was heated by the wood-burning stove. Photo by 910 Warren Stickney.

CONTRAPTION BY A LAZY BOY

In 1917 the homestead woodpile contained many big logs. 907 Fernald Stickney, age 16, was invited to slice these with the traditional crosscut saw. Instead he made a drag saw from junk, driven by the all-purpose gasoline engine in the cellar. It worked. Photo from a glass plate.

TELEPHONE MAN

805 Clinton Stickney maintained about 400 telephones scattered over 19 townships with a total area of 700 square miles. This was done with a Model T Ford when roads were passable, otherwise with horse, buggy, sleigh or on foot.

The long musket with bayonet (top center) was carried in the Revolutionary War by 302 Samuel Stickney from 1779 to 1781. Originally a flintlock, this cherished heirloom was later converted to a percussion lock for hunting. Samuel Stickney was one of the original settlers of Brownville, in 1809.

ONTI ORA—A SHOW PLACE OF LICKING COUNTY, OHIO

From 1911 to the early 1940's, 804 Malcolm Stickney and his wife 804A Edith labored to design and build their home on a hilltop in Granville, Ohio. They named it Onti Ora — The High Place. 909 Wilder Stickney lived here as a boy in 1916 -19. 908 Rachel, 903 Geraldine, 904 Eleanor, and 903A Milton Fitch attended Denison Univ. and knew the place well.

THE GARDENS OF ONTI ORA

804 Malcolm Stickney as Professor of Botany at Denison Univ., and his wife 804A Edith, an active member of Garden Clubs, created a showplace garden with their own hands. It was landscaped with stone walls, foot bridges, fruit trees, a lily pool, and featured an iris garden containing more than 50 varieties.

CENTENARIAN ADMITS TIMES DO CHANGE

"Spring is new to me every time it comes," said Myron W. Stickney, sitting in his garden.

Today is his 100th birthday. "I'm having a nice time being old."

Stickney, sporting a jaunty straw hat, sat with his wife, Bessie, and his daughter, Geraldine Fitch, in the sunny backyard of the Fitch house at 435 Massasoit Road.

Bessie Stickney's birthday is today also, but she says her age is a "dead secret."

Stickney himself grew up in Brownville, Maine. He was schooled in a one-room red schoolhouse, and graduated from Bates College in 1893. He says with pride that he is the oldest living graduate of the college.

He spent a term teaching school in Maine, where he taught "everything" to 26 students and conducted 36 classes a day.

"Or maybe it was 36 students and 26 classes a day: I tell it both ways. After all, nobody else is alive to contradict me," he said with a chuckle.

He did his graduate work at Brown University and earned a master's degree there.

He moved to Worcester soon afterward and started teaching at Worcester Academy and then at the old English High School. When English was divided into Commerce and Classical, he went to the High School of Commerce, where he taught physiology, botany and chemistry.

$850 A YEAR

In his first year at Worcester Academy he was paid $850. "It was good money for those days," he said.

Stickney taught in the Worcester school system until "he felt like quitting"—when he was 76.

The Stickneys will celebrate their birthdays together today, and in August will celebrate their 60th wedding anniversary.

The couple has four children, six grandchildren and seven great-grandchildren.

The shoes were of course worn by 903 Geraldine at her 1935 wedding to 903A Milton Fitch.

Biographical Section
INTRODUCTION

Biographies are presented for all of the descendants of Enos Wilder Stickney who were at least eighteen years of age or married at the time of publication. Younger descendants are listed in the Genealogical Section, PART TWO.

Biographies of the Seventh and Eighth generations were compiled from many sources, including those living descendants who knew the person well. For the Ninth and later generations, information was supplied mostly by the descendants themselves by means of questionnaires and personal interviews. Photographs of mature blood descendants are presented with their biographies.

The considerable work of obtaining and editing this biographical information was done by 908 Rachel Stickney during her retirement.

There has been 100% response to requests for biographical information, which is deeply appreciated.

Special thanks are due the following people:

903 Geraldine Fitch and 1011 Nancy Rainier for original research and suggestions.

905 Maynard Johnson for checking all members of his family.

901 Elizabeth Stickney and 1006 Marjorie Stickney for assisting in obtaining pictures.

906 Stuart Johnson for assisting in gathering biographies from his family.

805B Helen Stickney for finding old photographs, identifying people in pictures, and helping in many other ways.

1003 Robert Johnson for his assistance during the early stages of the genealogy.

907A Frances Stickney for her valued solutions to problems of all kinds.

And many, many others who have cooperated in the extensive research which made this book a reality.

ARRANGEMENT OF BIOGRAPHIES

Biographies are arranged first according to generation, and second according to families. This places all mature children of a family together with the same line parent's number appearing in ( ) to the right of each name.

Husbands and wives are placed together within their generation. An alphabetical index is provided to assist in locating any biography.

Seventh Generation

701 ENOS WILDER STICKNEY

was born July 7, 1837 at Brownville, Maine

SCHOOLS: Brownville Public Schools; Foxcroft Academy

OCCUPATIONS: Teacher, Farmer, Salesman.

MARRIED: May 25, 1865 at Milo, Maine to

701A ELIZABETH RACHEL SEARLES

CHILDREN:

801 Irving Metcalf Stickney (701) d. 1872
802 Myron Wilder Stickney (701)
803 Nettie Elizabeth Stickney (701)
804 Malcolm Enos Stickney (701)
805 Clinton Stanley Stickney (701)

Enos Wilder Stickney received his middle name from a Mr. Wilder who, at about the time of his birth, purchased a site on the farm and for a time operated a slate quarry there.

After he was graduated from Foxcroft Academy, Enos taught school in Sebec. About the time of the Civil War he contracted a throat ailment which necessitated giving up school, so he bought some books and in order to get out of doors, went from house to house selling them. At first he was so weak that he would ask permission to lie down awhile before beginning his sales talk. His health grew better, and he discovered he had a flair for salesmanship, and thus began his merchandising route which spread eventually to Milo, Medford, Springfield, Lee, Houlton and on up thru Aroostook County towns to Mars Hill.

He was sometimes held up for two or three days at a time by "anchor ice" at Howland where he crossed the river by ferry.

He went twice a year to Amos Abbott & Co. at Dexter where he bought the famous Dexter cloth, and twice a year to Boston by train to R. H. White, Jordan Marsh and Brown Durrell to buy goods. On his selling trips he bartered for wool which he sold to Fenno and Manning, later Fenno Bros. and Childs, Atlantic Ave., Boston. One account found among his papers was for $4000 due from Fenno Bros and Childs for wool. He laid by $1000 a year. His receipts in silver at the end of one of his trips would overrun a 6 qt. milk pan.

One evening as he was driving thru Long Swamp on his way home carrying considerable money, a man stepped out from the bushes at the roadside and siezed the bridle on the nearest horse. Enos's team at that time was King and Queen — Queen being a good honest dependable mare, while King was a fiery roan of uncertain temper. It was King's bridle that the hold-up man had grasped. With quick thinking so characteristic of him, Enos struck Queen with the whip. Her jump threw the pole of the cart against King, and he didn't like it. He reared and struck his fore-feet, and the hold-up man was literally thrown into the ditch while the team went down the road at a gallop.

In absence of the minister at church, Enos used to read a sermon.

Enos liked a good team of horses, and took much pride in his outfit. He stopped at hotels and special places where he had made friends, and he had many friends.

He had three peddle carts, the first a small one, the second one larger. When that cart grew too small wings were added to each side. One of those wings is under the china cupboard in the diningroom at the Homestead. The last cart built by Walter Sherburne, blacksmith and carriage builder of Brownville (also builder of the second cart) was larger and more elaborate and convenient in every way. One added feature was a drawer underneath the body of the cart, in which were kept buttons, thread, trimmings and other "findings". In this cart, with his big team of "Phil" and "Dick" he had real reason for pride. This last cart was sold directly to Frank Davis, his helper of a number of trips.

Enos had a store in what is now the bedroom on the first floor at the Homestead, and the counter was the table now in the kitchen (1973). Hundreds of yards of dress goods have been sold over this table. About the only advertising he did was to send out postal cards advising that he would be in a certain place with his stock of goods at a certain time.

On one occasion in Medford where a family had been burned out, he tore off a "dress pattern," added buttons, thread and trimming, and presented it to the lady of the burned house.

In the financial depression of the late 70's and early 80's Enos gave employment to some of the neighbors in a project to clear rocks from the fields near the house. Huge granite boulders were split by drilling rows of holes and driving in wedges. The pieces were hoisted out with a "rock lifter," hauled away and laid up into stone walls four feet high and wide enough for a team to be driven along the top. These walls are still standing as a memorial to his interest in the well-being of his neighbors.

During the same depression Enos employed John Foss for months in putting in dormer windows, and finishing rooms over the dining room and kitchen for attractive quarters — one for the boys and and the other for the hired girl; in building a room for Nettie on the first floor leading off from the diningroom; and constructing a piazza on the east in the angle between the old part of the house and the ell. In the summer of 1883 he re-modeled the barn, more than doubling its size, changing the direction of the roof, and making of it a pretentious structure, with a cupola topped by a large copper weathervane, a model of Maud S., a racing horse.

In 1876 Grandfather Enos went to the Centennial at Philadelphia, and wrote a letter home to Grandmother Lizzie on one of the first typewriters ever built. The letter was mailed in a special envelope with a special stamp, and is still a family heirloom.

Along in August, 1887 when a crew of men were cutting bushes in the strip of pasture above the east field (it was possible in those days to see the Dan Smith place), Enos started to mount a horse to go up and see how they were getting on. The horse jumped as he mounted him, but Grandfather hung on. He got a severe strain about the heart in so doing, and was obliged to come back and give up the trip. However, he was up the next day, and eventually made another trip to Aroostook. When he got to Houlton however he became ill, left the cart to be brought home by the man who always went on his trips with him, and came home by train. He was sick for a week, and died November 8, 1887. He is buried in Brownville.

His father died suddenly when Clinton was 11 years old. After leaving high school in 1893 he managed the homestead farm while his two older brothers were in college, and for many years thereafter. He became interested in the telephone, then a rapidly expanding new industry.

In May 1901 he completed and operated a telephone line in Brownville between the Stickney house and the Horace Johnson house, half a mile away. The demand for telephones increased rapidly, but the earlier-formed Brownville Telephone Co. provided only business service. To provide a home service he organized the Pioneer Telephone System in 1903, and became its manager and principal owner. There were four party lines in the system. The central operator was Almeda Stickney Merrill, and there was a duplicate switchboard at the Stickney Homestead.

The Pioneer system expanded to a total of 49 telephones over the greater part of Brownville East of the Pleasant River, and included phones in Brownville Junction (then known as Henderson) and Lake View. The two telephone systems were in competition until February 1912, when they were combined under the management of Ezekiel L. Chase. Clinton assumed the duties of combination lineman, repairman, installer, and trouble shooter for the combined company's whole territory, including Milo and some outlying towns.

The Brownville Telephone Co. was absorbed in 1916 by the Moosehead Telephone Company of Dover-Foxcroft, and later this firm became a part of the New England Tel. & Tel. Co. Clinton continued in his position of combination repairman until he retired in December 1927. He also performed similar services for the Lagrange and Medford Telephone Co. The territory over which he worked included 19 townships and an area of about 700 square miles. The number of telephones in this area was estimated at about 400.

He was active in civic affairs and held a considerable number of volunteer and elected offices. Boy Scouts came to America in 1910. In 1912 Clinton helped organize the original troop in Brownville. He was Assistant Scoutmaster from 1912 to 1915 and led and directed many of the camping and woodcraft programs.

When the Brownville Centennial was celebrated in 1925 Clinton was chairman of the antique exhibit which included many items from his own extensive collection.

During World War II Stickney Hill was selected as an Observation Post of the Aircraft Warning Service. A small building was erected South of the homestead barn, and Clinton was made Chief Observer.

He collected many kinds of antiques over the years, and displayed them as a home museum in the Northwest room of the homestead. Explaining the unusual items to the many visitors who called gave him a great deal of pleasure. Outstanding in the museum was the collection of antique weapons, scrimshaw, Indian relics, pioneer household items, and souvenirs from the days of whaling.

One item was a fine brass telescope which had belonged to John Spicer, a whaling captain out of Old Mystic, Conn., an uncle of his wife Helen. With this telescope supplementing his extensive travels in telephone work, he could identify most of the visible landmarks. A memorable experience for visitors was a trip to the cupola of the barn, some 40 feet above ground level to enjoy the view. On clear days mountains over 100 miles away could be identified.

Clinton was a man of many skills and interests. All of the boys were taught skills in designing and making things. His interests in woodcraft, photography, collecting and "fixing things" have been passed along.

Arlene Pike Johnson was a treasured friend, and a loving wife and mother.

She was big of heart, and couldn't turn down a stray person, dog or cat in need.

She cared for her aging parents until their death; she took complete care of her two oldest grandchildren for three years so that their parents could complete college and teach. We never heard her say anything malicious or unkind about anyone, yet she had a warm human personality with a sense of humor.

Her last three years were spent in Japan where, despite her battle with cancer, she took Japanese lessons and flower arranging, climbed Mt. Fujiama, and toured part of the country.
